

An Employability Skills Program

For Entry Level Employment

The WorkGo Job Readiness Animation series is designed to introduce basic employment attitudes and skills employers expect from new employees. The series presents seven characters finding their first jobs and a range of situations where they have to make decisions at work and see the probable results of their actions.

The program covers skills such as; having a positive attitude, being there, staying focused, doing your best, accepting guidance, being flexible, staying calm, looking after yourself, being honest, doing more than expected, communicating effectively, being a positive team player and being professional.

The program has proven to be very engaging for those with little or no work experience and for those with learning disabilities. The program has been successful in conveying basic employment skills in a positive way. The program highlights attitudes and behaviours for achieving success at work.

The program is delivered in an online format only and can be used by a teacher or facilitator in a class or group setting, or individually with students or clients. The program includes a teacher/facilitator guide, and an optional client/student workbook with exercises along with scene summaries and quizzes.
